

Hooks, Angles & Systems.

The gap between what your customers say about you and what your marketing says about you. And the operating system that closes it.

Your customers already know why your product matters. Your marketing doesn't sound anything like them.

They tell their friends. They post about you without being asked. They come back. Then the marketing sounds like a pitch deck. Features, differentiators, competitive advantages. Language that means everything to you and nothing to the person scrolling at 11pm wondering if there's a version of this that fits their life.

That gap is where I work.

BEHAVIORAL INSIGHT

18 years in psychology, coaching, and transformation. Sitting across from people in the middle of becoming someone new.

DIRECT RESPONSE

Professional copywriting and ghostwriting. Hooks, scripts, and angles built on proven DR frameworks, not vibes.

DATA LITERACY

Hook Rate, Hold Rate, CTR, CPA, ROAS read as diagnostics, not vanity. Rules locked before the test.

AI-NATIVE WORKFLOW

Claude, Gemini, Veo, HeyGen integrated across research, briefing, and reporting. Speed without losing judgment.

THE APPLIED CASE STUDY IN THIS DECK

Men's hair loss on Meta, a category I know well, built as a proof of concept for how I'd run a real first 30 days. One category, five connected deliverables, so the work reads as one system, not isolated exercises. Real competitor creative, real platform constraints, real strategic thinking on the page. (The JCKED and Puravita briefs alongside this deck are the same method, run live on your two brands.)

The moment a person changes isn't when they hear the right argument. It's when they see themselves differently.

WHERE IT COMES FROM

Eighteen years studying why people change. Not in marketing. In psychology and coaching.

I design campaigns where your existing customers, the ones who already love you, become your media channel. Not through referral codes. Through identity.

THE ARC

Coach → copywriter → strategist. DR turned out to be coaching, compressed.

WRITING NOW

Parallax. A publication on psychology, identity, and why people actually change.

WHAT THAT LOOKS LIKE IN THE WORK

- The identity word your product should own, and why your current copy is burying it. Every category has one. Most brands pay CPMs to own the wrong one.
- Customer-voice architecture that sounds like your best buyers, not your brand guidelines. The hook bank on slide 06 is the output of this method.
- Campaigns where the customer's post-purchase behavior is the advertisement. Identity moments engineered into the product experience.
- Economics: what your CAC should buy when the creative is doing the identity work.

5—8%

of paid social ads ever become real winners. Roughly half never get meaningful spend at all.

Motion · 2026 Creative Benchmarks · 550,000+ ads, 6,000+ advertisers, ~$1.3B in spend

The winners aren't found by writing better ads. They're found by listening better.

GoPro didn't sell cameras. They sold the feeling of being the kind of person who does things worth filming. The product became invisible. The identity did the selling.

That's the mechanic underneath every winner. Most portfolios show finished ads. This one shows the operating system that finds that mechanic before the budget burns.

The ad I'd ship on day 30, and why it opens with a barber, not a side effect.

SPOKEN HOOK · 0:00–0:03 · DIRECT TO CAMERA, BATHROOM MIRROR, NO FILTER

"My barber told me something last week that I genuinely cannot stop thinking about."

01 · CURIOSITY + AUTHORITY TRANSFER

The viewer doesn't yet know what the barber said. Open loop, and the brain is wired to close it. Authority borrowed from a non-salesy figure. A barber sees more scalps than any dermatologist, and the audience knows it.

02 · BYPASSES THE "THIS IS AN AD" FILTER

No product, claim, or urgency in the first three seconds. Pain-led hooks ("Losing your hair?") run into Meta's Personal Attributes enforcement. Curiosity clears it.

03 · CUSTOMER VOICE, NOT BRAND VOICE

This is how a real guy tells the story, not how a brand writes it. The strongest beat ("my girlfriend noticed before I did") lands because the ad refuses to sound like a pitch deck.

Ten hooks. Seven levers. The rule that separates a bank from a dump.

#	SPOKEN HOOK	LEVER
01	"My barber told me something last week that I cannot stop thinking about."	Curiosity / Authority
02	"I almost booked the transplant. Then my girlfriend showed me this."	Pattern Interrupt
03	"Three things every guy with thinning hair gets wrong. I did all three."	Curiosity / Self-Deprecation
04	"If your hairline's been moving for a year, watch this before you spend another dollar."	Pain / Loss Aversion
05	"Minoxidil works. Until it doesn't. Here's what nobody tells you about month 14."	Authority / Hidden Truth
06	"Take a guess how old I am. Now guess how old my hair is."	Contrast / Curiosity
07	"My dad went bald at 32. I'm 36. Here's what I did differently."	Social Proof / Genetic
08	"I spent $4,200 on hair stuff last year. One thing actually moved the needle."	Authority / Specificity
09	"POV: you finally figure out it wasn't the DHT, it was the inflammation."	Hidden Truth / Mechanism
10	"Stop. If you're losing hair and you're under 40, you need to hear this."	Pattern Interrupt

THE RULE

No two hooks pull the same lever.

Shipping ten curiosity hooks teaches you nothing about which lever the audience actually responds to. Spread the levers and Week 1 doesn't just find a winning hook. It tells you what kind of hook wins, so Week 2 compounds instead of guessing.

Research to iteration in four weeks. $15K total. AI where it earns its place.

First paid-social launch on Meta · $3K production + $12K media

WEEK 01

Research & angle development

Deliverable: Angle Bank, 8 validated angles ranked by predicted performance. VOC mining across 100+ reviews, 30 ads from 6 competitors, 4-criteria scoring, sign-off on top 4.

AI · Claude/Gemini VOC clustering · competitor ad audit · subreddit synthesis

WEEK 02

Brief writing & production

Deliverable: 12 finished video assets + 4 cutdowns. 4 angles × 3 hooks, two creator archetypes (everyday-guy + partner POV), AI b-roll + HeyGen.

AI · Claude brief drafting · Veo / HeyGen / Kling · Descript trims

WEEK 03

Testing phase

Deliverable: Hook-test results, a statistically meaningful winner. $6K over 7 days, ABO, 4 ad sets, 3 hooks each, decision rules locked before launch.

AI · Motion / Triple Whale dashboards · Claude daily "what is this telling me"

WEEK 04

Analysis & iteration

Deliverable: Performance memo + Weeks 5–8 roadmap. 4-layer diagnostic: hook, angle, creator, audience. Scale, iterate, or diagnose offer before blaming creative.

AI · Motion reporting · Claude diagnostic synthesis

Lock the rules before the data starts arguing with you.

WEEK 3 · KPIS IN PRIORITY ORDER

KPI	WHAT IT DIAGNOSES	TARGET
Hook Rate	Creative thumbstop. Is the first frame doing its job.	> 30%
Hold Rate	Script middle strength. Does the second loop open before the first closes.	> 40%
CTR (link)	Overall ad health. Hook + middle + CTA in concert.	> 1.5%
CPA	Business outcome at category AOV.	< $45
ROAS	Directional only at this volume.	Hold

LOCKED BEFORE LAUNCH · THE THREE RULES THAT DECIDE WHAT LIVES

KILL

Hook Rate below 20% after $200 spend.

SCALE

Hook Rate > 30% and CTR > 1.2%.

ITERATE

Anything in the middle. Retest Week 4 with new middles, same hooks.

BENCHMARK ANCHOR

Motion 2026 sets the category floor at a 30–40% Hook Rate. Below 25% signals a creative problem, not a media problem. The rules above are calibrated to that floor, not to a gut feel.

Keeps Commercial #04. What's working, and what's quietly costing them.

VERIFIED · KEEPS.COM/LEARN/KEEPS-HAIR-LOSS-COMMERCIALS

"Yeah, hair loss runs in my family. But I use Keeps, the easiest way to keep my hair. Keeps sends me clinically-proven treatments that can stop my hair loss. Learn more at Keeps.com."

WHAT'S WORKING

01 · The concession opener. "Yeah, hair loss runs in my family" → immediate pivot to "But I use Keeps." A one-beat hook with a hard turn at the conjunction.

02 · It walks past the defense. Most ads open with "Worried about hair loss?" and the viewer's guard is already up. Keeps agrees with the viewer first, then pitches.

03 · Proof compression. "Clinically-proven" carries the whole credibility load in 11 words, right before the CTA. And the "easiest way to keep my hair" line repeats across Keeps' library, compounding recall.

WHAT'S COSTING THEM

01 · It validates the fatalism. "Hair loss runs in my family" reinforces the genetic-helplessness belief that delays purchase. The avatar buys when he believes he has agency, not when he's told it's inherited.

02 · Convenience over outcome. "Easiest way" sells the subscription, not the result. In a category running high CPMs, the ad that sells the outcome wins the click.

03 · No mechanism. "Clinically-proven" is a claim, not a reason. Nothing teaches the viewer why it works, so nothing reframes his story.

Same family reference. Opposite ending.

MY COUNTER · SPOKEN HOOK · 0:00-0:04

"My dad went bald at 32. I'm 36. Here's what I did differently."

The same family reference, used to disprove fatalism instead of validate it. Genetic helplessness is the #1 mental block in male hair loss. Disproving it through a direct family contrast is the most powerful angle available, and counter-positioning against an established brand's stale message is one of the highest-leverage moves in DR.

01 · INVERSION VARIANT

Fatalism flipped to agency. Hypothesis: lower CPA on cold traffic. Agency-framing beats acceptance-framing in prospecting because it gives the buyer permission to act. Same creator, same length, only the worldview flips.

02 · SPECIFICITY VARIANT

"Clinically-proven" → drug names + price. Hypothesis: higher CTR among the qualified avatar. "The same minoxidil and finasteride a dermatologist prescribes, $25/month." Hard specificity beats soft credibility.

03 · ANTI-COUCH VARIANT

Reject the convenience frame entirely. Hypothesis: novelty angle, fresh creative oxygen. A creator who got off the couch, went to a dermatologist, and came back with a result the subscription never promised.

Nutrafol owns women's by sub-segmenting it. Men's is wide open.

VERIFIED · ACTIVE META CREATIVE, JUNE 2026

"GLP-1 associated hair thinning. When you have a significant amount of weight loss, it's stressful on the body, and what we see clinically is hair thinning. I often recommend a hair-growth nutraceutical."

THREE MOVES YOU CAN VERIFY BY WATCHING THE AD

Authority frame. A clinician voice, not a model. The credibility comes from the delivery, not a before-and-after.

New-category naming. "GLP-1 hair thinning" is a sub-segment nobody else owns yet. Naming the problem is how you own the solution.

Implicit validation. "What we see clinically" makes the viewer's private worry feel observed and normal, which lowers the buying defense.

THE EXTENSION · MEN'S SIDE

Don't ship one creative engine. Ship four.

Nutrafol's women's playbook isn't one ad. It's audience segmentation disguised as creative. The same logic is wide open on the male side, where every competitor still ships one undifferentiated message.

Segment 01 · Hairline recession

Segment 02 · Crown thinning

Segment 03 · Post-finasteride recovery

Segment 04 · Post-transplant maintenance

Extracted principle. Each segment gets its own hook bank, creator archetype, and CPA target. That's the moat. Authority AND UGC, not authority OR UGC.

Week 1 with me: VOC mining done. Angle Bank delivered. Top four briefed by Friday.

THE FIRST FIVE WORKING DAYS

Day 01-02 · VOC mining. 100+ reviews across the brand, two competitors, and r/tressless. Language bank built, tagged by pain point, prior solution, emotional state.

Day 03 · Competitor ad audit. 30 running ads across six brands. Hook type, angle, creator archetype, CTA pattern documented as a 30-day proxy for "winner."

Day 04 · Angle synthesis. Eight angles, each with core insight, sub-segment, VOC evidence, creator type. Ranked 1-5 on novelty, emotional weight, mechanism clarity, social proof.

Day 05 · Alignment call. Walk you through the Angle Bank. Sign-off on the top four to brief in Week 2.

WHAT'S IN FRONT OF YOU

Two live briefs, JCKED and Puravita, are the same method run on your brands. This deck is the system underneath them. Five connected hair-loss deliverables, one scenario, every fact traced to a verified source.

CONTACT

Farrice Cain

Creative Strategist · Direct Response · Los Angeles

farrice.cain@gmail.com · (773) 957-8807

See how I think before we talk. Parallax, my publication on psychology, identity, and why people actually change.