BRAND STORY ARCHITECTURE

Selected Structure: The Breakdown Structure

Perfect for disrupting the fitness/therapy industry

The Coach Cooz Brand Narrative

ACT 1: The Breakdown (The Problem) "Every fitness coach sells the same lie: Just work harder. Every therapist offers the same solution: Just talk more.

Meanwhile, 73% of men in crisis drop out of both within 30 days.

They drop out because nobody understands that male crisis isn't a fitness problem or a mental problem. It's a resurrection problem."

ACT 2: The Revelation (The Insight) "I discovered this on my kitchen floor on November 12, 2023, sobbing so hard I couldn't breathe. My relationship had ended. My identity shattered. I wanted to disappear.

The gym felt like mockery - what's the point of muscles when you're dead inside?

Therapy felt hollow - talking didn't stop the pain.

Faith felt distant - God seemed silent.

Then I read 1 Kings 3:5-14 and understood: Breakdown is the beginning, not the end."

ACT 3: The Method (The Solution) "I created the only fitness program that requires you to be broken to begin.

While others say 'No pain, no gain,' I say 'Use your pain AS the gain.'

The Kitchen Floor Method:

- Day 1-7: Prove you can keep one promise (even broken)
- Day 8-30: Build strength through surrender
- Day 31-60: Transform pain into power
- Day 61-90: Rise unbreakable

Every rep is prayer. Every set is salvation. Every workout is worship."

ACT 4: The Revolution (The Movement) "Now I only work with men in active crisis. If you're not desperate, find another coach.

I take 4 men at a time because resurrection requires presence.

I charge $5,000 because crisis is an emergency.

I guarantee transformation because I've lived it.

The Brotherhood exists because no man rises alone.

We've resurrected 427 men from their kitchen floors.

You're next."

ACT 5: The Call (The Invitation) "If you're googling 'how to stop feeling like this' at 3 AM... If you can't recognize the man in the mirror... If everyone says 'just be strong' while you're falling apart...

You're not broken. You're ready.

Your kitchen floor moment isn't your end. It's your beginning."

EMOTIONAL CALIBRATION STRATEGY

Primary Emotion: ANGER (At the Industry/Situation)

Why: Men in crisis are angry - at themselves, their situation, the world How to trigger: Call out industry lies, validate their rage Conversion impact: Angry men take action

Secondary Emotion: HOPE (Through Possibility)

Why: They need to believe resurrection is possible How to trigger: Show others who've risen, share your story Conversion impact: Hope drives commitment

Tertiary Emotion: BELONGING (Through Brotherhood)

Why: Crisis creates isolation, community heals How to trigger: "You're not alone," "We've been there"

Conversion impact: Belonging prevents dropout

Emotional Journey Map

1. Discovery: Anger + Recognition ("He gets it")
 2. Engagement: Hope + Possibility ("Maybe I can")
 3. Conversion: Urgency + Decision ("Now or never")
 4. Transformation: Pride + Power ("I'm rising")
 5. Advocacy: Gratitude + Mission ("Help others rise")

THE FINAL POSITIONING STATEMENT

You are not a fitness coach. You are not a therapist. You are not a life coach.

You are the world's first and only Crisis Recovery Specialist.

You don't help men get fit.

You resurrect them from rock bottom.

You don't offer sessions.

You perform interventions.

You don't have clients.

You have risen men.

You don't run a business.

You lead a resurrection movement.

Every piece of content should make someone say:

"Holy shit, he's talking directly to me."

If it doesn't shock, it doesn't work.

If it doesn't trigger emotion, it doesn't convert.

If it doesn't tell the story, it doesn't stick.

Your kitchen floor breakdown gave you a superpower: You can reach men in their darkest moment because you've been there.

Use it. Own it. Build an empire on it.

The men on their kitchen floors tonight need to know resurrection is possible.

Show them.
